dispatch published today in The New York Times from its Washington bureau that said that the United States secretly mounted nuclear warheads on planes and missiles of West Germany and other North Atlantic Allies during the last six years drew the following statement from the Defense Department:

"It is Department of Defense policy not to discuss location, numbers or operations involving in the last six years drew the following statement:

"It is Department of Defense policy not to discuss location, numbers or operations involving in the last six years drew the following statement from the Defense Department:

"It is Department of Defense policy not to discuss location, numbers or operations involving in the last six years drew the following statement from the Defense Department of Defense policy not to discuss location, numbers or operations involving in the last six years drew the following statement from the Defense Department of Defense policy not to discuss location, numbers or operations involving in the last six years drew the following statement from the Defense Department of Defense policy not to discuss location, numbers or operations involving in recent years "have the controls been strengthened to the point where unauthorized use of the warheads by an ally call the properties of the warheads by an ally control of the nuclear weapons has at times "existed more in principle than in fact." It also said that only in recent years "have the controls been strengthened to the point where unauthorized use of the warheads by an ally control of the dispatch and included in it.

The Times before publication of the dispatch and included in it.

The Times strength and included in it.

The Times before publication of the dispatch and included in it.

The Times tenter of the declaration was identical with a Pentagon statement given to the declaration was identical with a Pentagon statement given to the dispatch and included in it. WASHINGTON, Nov. 21-A U.S. Comments on Article | nuclear weapons. No matter In Times About Warheads States warheads are always unwhere they are located, United der U.S. custody."

The first sentence of this